It allows users to browse, play, create playlists and pause. Ivan the Terrible was born in 1605 in the region of Velikobukh in the Muscovite state of Russia. He was the son of Tsar Boris Godunov. Godunov was an incredibly charismatic ruler who was killed in 1605. His murder resulted in a power struggle among his descendants and the rise of the False Dmitry. That in turn led to the death of Tsar Alexis and the downfall of the Moscow branch of the Russian House of Rurik. Ivan IV was the last male in the Moscow Rurik dynasty and he ascended to the throne of Russia as Tsar in 1613. Under his reign the administrative-administrative apparatus of Muscovy expanded. Due to the fact that he was a sickly child and under the care of his mother, Ivan IV was a victim of the intrigue of his uncle Mikhail Fedorovich. Ivan IV, who was considered "innocent" by his uncle Fedorovich, was the first of the Rurik dynasty to become Orthodox tsar. It was after his return to the Russian lands that the Orthodox church restored its jurisdiction and the process of its canonization. In 1618 - 1620, the idea of the Great Embassy was to search for a way out of the Russian - Polish war. In the person of Tsar Alexis a peace conference with Poland was planned. On the trip Alexis, his wife Marina Mniszech (the daughter of Tsar Fedor) and the Great Embassy were attacked by the German mercenaries led by the hetman of the boyars Vasily Golitsyn. A peace agreement was signed on the Polish territory of Zator, which came into force in 1619. After the peace treaty, Tsar Alexis left the Moscow state and returned to Tsardom. By that time the tsar was already sick. On February 9, 1625, in Velikobukh, Tsar Alexis was murdered. The tsar was buried in thore. In 1627, the council of boyars made a decision to pass the throne to the son of Tsar Michael Feodorovich
