The discs have been released in a limited pressing of 500 copies. Although Kitaro initially gravitated towards folk-oriented music in the mid-1970s, by the late 1990s he had gone back to his "old" style of slow, distorted, and noisy tracks, although he always added a bluesy touch to them. In July 2003, Kitaro announced that he had to take a break from the music scene, because he suffered from some malignancies that were fighting back. Kitaro announced on his website and in a press release that his doctor had requested him to take a break. In the release he stated that his cancer was in remission. After the break, Kitaro would return with new music and a new project. He is still under surgery and is still working hard and has also released two new albums in 2009 "Kitaro Presents Mi_ami Kitaro" and "The 8th - Discography". In one of the more surreal stories in modern cricket history, a Deccan Chargers player was dismissed for repeatedly running up to the umpire and begging for a caught behind decision. Even with a century on his CV, Sanju Samson was out of luck, and got deposed in the process. Karnataka's Manish Malhotra had given a catch to Gujarat's Saurabh Tiwary, but the umpire quickly gave the dressing room some relief after Malhotra requested that it be put aside. And once there, Samson began shouting at the umpire, threatening and begging for the decision to be overturned. When that didn't work, he even walked off the field with his bat before returning. Of course, when he returned it was Tiwary who had scored the
