This script runs in the background and monitors the current window. When a window that is dragging and can be made translucent by the right mouse button is released, then it will:

- o 1. Automatically add an entry to the existing collection of window specific scripts, called dragCollection. o 2. Run itself. o 3. Register the window for new drag events. o 4. Remove the window entry from the collection of window specific scripts, called dragCollection. o 5. Only one instance of dragCollection can be run. To make it more accurate, the script uses the modifier keys - Shift, Control, Alt and Function keys. See Screenshot 1 - Screenshot 5 of 5. Screenshots: Screenshots 1 to 5 are of windows opened from the Microsoft Internet Explorer web browser that are modified. The Screenshots of the window, in the background, are of the right mouse button releases for moving windows. The screenshot taken in Screenshots 1 and 2 are of the first and second window closed.
