This week, Google is giving both Chrome OS and Android some love with two big updates: the Chrome OS beta launch and the Android 4.3 release. We don't know a whole lot about the latter, as it was only announced at Google's I/O conference a few days ago. We're looking forward to seeing what the new features include, but we do know what the Chrome OS update will bring. That's right: long-awaited extensions support.
