ChrisPC Free VPN Connection is a simple, free app that allows you to surf the Internet and access information in an unlimited way. High-speed VPN services, a database of more than 90+ locations, and maximum privacy protection “The app is great and there are a lot of servers that you can choose from.” “It’s great to see an app that allows us to bypass censorship, especially when it comes to providing a transparent platform for those seeking to use the Internet.” “ChrisPC Free VPN Connection seems to work quite well. It is a good way to bypass any censorship.” Like with other apps in the category, you can use the VPN with one click in the settings. For a more advanced setup, the application suggests that you read the documentation that accompanies the app. The list of servers is displayed in a large window. From this window, you can click to connect to one of the listed servers. You can also select a server from the list. Simply type the name of the server in the text box and click on Connect. The app is incredibly simple to use, but there are some minor annoyances. The only way to connect to the server is by entering the connection details. However, the app seems to need at least two taps to connect to the server. This is a really cool app. Uncensored news channels and access to information in countries where censorship is common The process is simple and fairly easy. The app works on all mobile devices as long as they are linked to the Internet, and only requires you to click on the Connect button. It will only connect to servers that are registered with ChrisPC. Simply search the official database. The app also allows you to manage the connections in the settings. The device where the app is installed should also be linked to a network that is registered with ChrisPC. You can choose to connect with a single device or with multiple ones. The connection allows you to bypass any obstacles that may prevent you from accessing certain content. When you connect to a server, you can use ChrisPC Free VPN Connection for several hours. When the connection expires, you will need to repeat the process in order to access the server again. Since the app is free, it does not offer any premium features that

Not often does a story as simple as the art and science of permaculture raise the hackles of the science-illiterate. But the government of Ecuador recently announced that its scientists had discovered a cure for most, if not all, human ailments, a claim that caused many of us to stop breathing for a few seconds. In a story that was picked up by the AFP news agency, Piedad Crespo, chief executive of the Ecuadorian Environmental Institute, announced that “the illness we have been fighting against for decades has been conquered, and our research proves this.” The cure was described as “the only effective treatment on the market,” and the cure for what? “For everything,” she replied. “It’s the greatest accomplishment.” If only it were true. The story, which sounded pretty tantalizing for a generation of Americans who struggle to see beyond the medical establishment, was pulled within hours of appearing online. Ecuador’s Minister of the Environment, Monica Verónica Saravia, began an investigation into the institute when she was tipped off to the story by the Ecuadorian daily El Universo. And from there it was off to the races with the usual outlets trying to make something out of nothing. The science was largely vapid, repeating, as the saying goes, that it would take at least a year to implement the solution in Ecuador. The government did not bother to explain what specific technology was used, or whether it was a proven solution. Saravia did claim that the solution would be patented and available for “every country in the world.” In other words, the cure for all is just a matter of time. Saravia did hint, however, that the cure would be released in 2014, leaving time for at least one more press release. Verónica Saravia’s claim that the cure has been “conquered” could be put to the test with a little experiment. She might want to have a sample of the solution tested. I’m pretty sure I don’t want to be the guinea pig. If the answer is “yes,” she could find herself in the company of a number of people who have claimed that they’ve conquered their health problems — for a few hours. “Oh, she told me to take an aspirin. But the cancer was cured in 19 hours 77a5ca646e
