It can be a long struggle to build business relationships and trust with new clients. When you have a problem, most people prefer not to call or discuss it over the phone, since it's almost always more efficient to talk face to face. However, it's vital to have a phone conversation at some point. It's not only cost efficient to call, but many people find it much more productive than writing a response to an email. Think about it, it's easier to have a phone conversation, so even if it's a small part of the relationship, a phone conversation means more communication. This means you have to have a phone conversation at some point, so here's a guide to having a good phone call, based on the three C's. e79caf774b
