What's new in Choco Pixel 5:

The rampant expansion of eSports as an industry has reached a major milestone with the announcement of Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC)'s Tuesday night live stream on Facebook with an estimated live audience of over 17 million as of November 20, 2013. This announcement is somewhat surprising as Electronic Sports World Cup (ESWC) has been running for six years and has been livestreamed on YouTube for three. The expansion of the industry which has grown from about $100,000 in revenue in 2011 to over $20 million in 2013, but is now up on the feeds of Facebook and YouTube and looks to have culminated in a formal contract agreement between the UFC and Viacom-owned YouTube channel, where Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) will stream its live events from September 15, 2013 until July 14, 2014. Viacom is one of the largest media conglomerates on the planet and a service like Facebook Live is an extension of their 'Viacom Digital' campaign and Amazon Web Services further cemented this with their partnership to stream The Oprah Magazine for the International Consumer Electronics Show (CES) run between January 7-10. While one could argue in light of this achievement that the explosion that the video gaming industry has seen in recent years and one could argue in light of this achievement that the video game industry has seen in recent years, the real story here is in the partnership to stream UFC events on Facebook and it represents a single step toward consuming and monetizing eSports, not only as a competitive hobby or leisure activity but as a fully thought-out business. UFC has confirmed that the money for the contract is more than $10 million, and I dare say $20m when you add the value of the content for others who are in the social space, plus the amount that it pushes the industry forward. This number in itself will continue to evolve as the industry expands. The UFC has a long history and their current ownership structure will look very different in the future. UFC sold the first event footage to ESPN for a reported amount of between $30,000-$50,000 in 2001 but the cash value was limitless and the rights went on to be worth millions. In the world of the UFC's house style, to sell media rights to a sporting genre is tantamount to making money from the conversation. It is what is known as "The Holy Grail" of media. They are slowly building towards becoming this hybrid of a gambling organization and a media company, expanding
