Enjoy a classic point-and-click, screen saver style adventure game! In D100 Dungeon, the only thing you can see is a hand-drawn grid of areas. Some areas of the grid are plain, some are locked or need a key, others are traps, and yet others contain a treasure. Explore the grid using your mouse and keyboard.

Click on doors and get either a wish or an instant death depending on the situation. Click on the key, cash, or treasure, and you'll keep clicking until it is gone. You'll often need to play several times to get to the end. Collect food and health to restore. Throw bones, gems, clocks, and other items into the inventory to use as you wish. Each time you explore a new area of the dungeon, your statistics will change and sometimes you'll acquire new abilities. Use your money to buy upgrades and items. You'll encounter several different types of characters - guards, bards, acolytes, monsters, merchants, and other characters. Each character has a personality and ability in common use. When you interact with a character, the character may laugh, sigh, or the like. You'll find items that you can use to improve your proficiency with your sword, dagger, lockpick, prayer beads, and even a sword of the Endless King. At the end of every dungeon, your adventurer will meet the King and receive credit for their efforts. Purchase special items and equipments to aid the adventurer in their next adventure. D100 Dungeon offers an in-game map to display the locations of the tiles on the grid. Have fun and learn a new set of skills!

D100 Dungeon Computer Companion [Updated]

There is a companion version of the D100 Dungeon Computer Game, which you will need to get the rules in. The Companion Version provides an online reference, reports on the stats of the player's adventurers and the cities, plus shows you the quests that are going on at a given time. It is a game on its own, for which all you need is the computer game. The Game is for D100 Dungeon Players: Each Adventurer consists of a set of one or more Stats, which are used to determine a wide variety of Characteristics. As an example, the following list shows you the Characteristics of a Level 4 Adventurer: Once the Adventurer has been created and the stats have been entered the player is ready to do any of the following: D100 Dungeon is a game in which you will steer an adventurer through underground caves and dungeons, looking for lost treasures and completing dangerous quests. With each game your adventurer will gain wealth, recognition and become stronger and increasingly skilled in their pursuits. The Computer Game has been carefully modeled after the pen and pencil version, which you will need in order to know the rules (which are available separately). The game enforces all the rules and does all the bookkeeping for you. It is not intended to replace the book version, but to provide a different means to enjoy D100 Dungeon. it is possible to switch between the computer version and the book version mid-game by using the Print and Edit features. Your journey begins when you create an adventurer and start performing the dungeon training missions. Once they have been successfully completed your Adventurer will be ready to face some greater challenges and begin questing in an endeavor to gain notoriety and wealth, rivaling that of royalty and who knows, one day their greatest exploits might even become stories and songs performed by bards in every tavern throughout the Kingdom. The Computer Game draws the maps and processes the adventure sheets, allowing you to sit back, relax and enjoy the story being created. Plus you will have professional looking maps to print out and keep for years to come. © 1999-2016, Jim Bambra +Plot Points Spare Only in Death Mayan Feng Shui: Focus on a Ruined Building Of Lights: The "Enchanted Keep" Name: The Ruins of the Enchanted Keep Description: An ancient Mayan temple that sits on a hill overlooking the Mystic River. Ruin-Map Identifier: 4274 B S.E 63.05 Height: 13.73 KM Description: The largest structure in the area is an ancient Mayan temple. It sits almost 70 feet high, and is approximately 77 feet across on the bottom, but grows considerably as it rises to twice that. The temple has a parapet fence at the top with a guillotine-like gate; the complete fence is about 52 feet above the ground and is extremely narrow for such a height. Outside it stands a ba'al tree (much smaller than other trees on the island). Weathered templars stand sentry by a small wooden door just above the entrance. A series of 5 stairs can be seen through an alcove to a balcony just above the door. A small library is on this level as well. From there another set of stairs lead up to the second level. On this level, a large gouged-out series of steps leads up into the temple. Inside the temple, you see a series of tombs and a skeletal body in the front middle of the floor. Crypt of Bone Idol: An Idol of Ta'ai-Mbau and King Camae Din Turtle: On the right side of the crypt are two idols. These are of Ta'ai-Mbau and King Camae Din, who were deified ancestors of the Mayans. Each idol is capable of moving on its own. High Priest or Hierophant: A man who wears a tan headcloth and a vest covered in badges. He does not stand to face the door but stands to the left, while facing the four cardinal points of the island. The Hierophant must be in tune with the stars at all times to accurately predict a person's death. His name is "Ronald". Want to Know: What you are looking for can have incredible mental effects, but may also unintentionally spell your death. Who: The monster's name is "Crousori". What: A plant-based monster, the chupacabra is rarely seen, but was once believed to be under the ocean, infecting fish with an infectious virus. In the Washington, D.

Wei Qi (魏齐; traditional: 魏齊, simplified: 魏齐, pinyin: Wèiqí) (150-220), courtesy name Zichen (子沉), art name Náonianxiu (阮安休), was an official of the state of Cao Wei during the Three Kingdoms period of China. Family background and early career Wei Qi was from Chencang County (陳倉縣), Chenliu Commandery (陳留郡) and a descendant of the Wei royal family, Cao Wei's founding emperor Emperor Wei. His grandfather Wei Paoxin (裴抱信), a son of Wei Jiao (魏交), was an official who assisted the warlord Cao Cao in his conquest of rival warlord Yuan Shao in the 190s. Wei Qi's father Wei Peng (魏彭) served as a minor official under the warlord-turned-follower of Cao Cao, Cao Cao's son and successor Cao Pi the former emperor (denoted as Emperor Xian by later historians) and later under Emperor Xian's aunt and Cao Pi's favourite Queen Dowager Cao and acted as an educator to Emperor Xian.
