Quick Start version

Game rules

Just tie it - There is no randomization

If you don't like randomness, let the computer bring all the pieces back on the two sides of the board!

Pull triggers - one opponent per turn, you cannot pull two pieces at once.

Every player gets one turn each a turn. You have to use all your turn to play all your pieces, this means there are no tie games. The standard move is to bring all your pieces back and place them near the blocks (I made the program so you don't need to do this, just leave them in the middle!).

Are your pieces here yet?

You can drag this icon any place on the board, even if it isn't near any block. Once you have placed them, click the "set" button. When you release the mouse button, your pieces will be placed.

Repeat the process.

If you click on an empty space, this space will stay empty forever.
If you click on another piece, it will occupy that space.

About Profile Information Number of activity points 28 Started playing chess November/Dec 2006 My rating 1900, August 2012 Not married No Female No Hobbies With my dog. Hi all, My name is Jemima and I just registered with chess "forum". I am only 3 months of on here, but I think I have made a little "deal with the devil" so to speak. The main reason being that all my local players are very male dominated and it takes a lot of reminding to get women to even play. I live near Peterborough and between here and there are many chess clubs, and my daughter is in 6th form at school and organises the weekly extra-curricular chess club (HLSC..). I persuaded my daughter to start a women's chess club here once more women started to come along and play in the men's league. We have done this at both her school and our local college. She gets the juniors while I get the under 9's. Tends to be hectic and time consuming at the moment with school/college sports etc., but I hope to start organising a league of some kind so that they can play at the weekends and I can go to support (I am ok at the "supporting" as I can get there from here quite quickly). At this time we have not got a club, but I am inviting chess players from the local area to register with "forum" as I'm not keen on "special interest groups". I'm not even in the best league using players who live elsewhere. My daughter has played several times on chess "forum". It is great to be able to attend "forum" and use their sponsorship system so to get some money is great. Hopefully I will have done enough to warrant some sign-on fee so I can assist any club I haven't already found. Cheers Jem, Jemima Bedward -- The Middelburg Special Club in South Africa is looking for sponsors, players and organisers for the 2013/2014 season. We urgently need advertising space (writing in Dutch is available) for our new club magazine. Further information can be requested by email or through the Club on facebook (www.middelburgcac.com) For all inquiries, please contact zkeenink
