Between December 1997 and August 2000, 1,619 patients underwent PCI; 1529 of these patients (94%) were monitored throughout the procedure with either continuous or intermittent electrocardiogram monitoring. Of these, 54% of the procedures were performed in hospitals with more than 50% of patients being monitored. There was no difference between patients with and without monitoring in regard to patient demographics, clinical presentation or outcomes. Proportion of patients being monitored increased with the number of treating physicians, length of procedure, and the number of emergency department visits or hospitalizations that occurred before the procedure.

Q: How to disable bookmarklet if some conditions are true? i'm trying to make code that execute bookmarklet when clicking on some div. Clicking it should deactivate the javascript that creates the action. If i do that all is ok, however if it's true that.myclass and.myclass2 are already visible on the web page, i want to deactivate it. `if($("#div.myclass").is(":visible") && $("#div.myclass2").is(":visible"))` It works, but if is is already true, nothing happens. I have the feeling that the code is not really correct. Thanks A: You are checking visibility, instead check if they are there.

$("#div.myclass").length > 0 &&
$("#div.myclass2").length > 0

SALT LAKE CITY — A Utah man who secretly took a male human brain and penis while they were being prepared for neurosurgery is scheduled to be sentenced Friday. After a four-day trial, Jerome Allen Cook, 64, pleaded guilty in April to three charges, including unauthorized use of human tissue. Cook is accused of having the organs while working at the University of Utah Medical Center in 2001 and 2002. He initially said he found them in a box of body parts, but according to prosecutors, Cook disposed
