To ensure an adequate and sound mental health care for children and adolescents and their families, the Centre for Health Promotion in Norway was asked to formulate a vision of the future cooperation between public authorities and care providers in the field of child and youth mental health. A group of experts was convened, working with the project leader and three ministers of health, youth and social affairs, and representatives from the Norwegian Public Health Association, the Norwegian Association of Child and Youth Psychiatric Centers, the Norwegian Association of Child and Youth Mental Health Services and Children's Services for Adults. The group created the methodological basis for the risk-sharing model, which consists of a strategy with three aims: to increase the awareness of children and youth; to strengthen the care by public authorities; and to improve the care. The risk-sharing model is based on the assumptions that children and adolescents who are difficult to treat will not always receive good care, whereas children and adolescents who receive good treatment will not always be difficult to treat; and that primary and secondary preventive measures are important for the reduction of costs. The model assumes that children who are difficult to treat will be identified and referred to special care, that children in need of primary and secondary preventive measures will be identified and given appropriate care and that children who receive good treatment will be identified as being difficult to treat and receive care for this problem. By means of the three aims, the model wants to ensure that children and adolescents are a high priority for the health services, that they are given adequate care, that prevention begins early in life, that attention is given to the families and that the children are returned to their normal life when the problems are resolved.

update How do I upgrade my GIMP to 2.8.2 on Ubuntu? How do I upgrade my GIMP to 2.8.2 on Ubuntu? This is a commonly asked question. The short answer is that you cannot (at least not easily) upgrade from Gimp 2.6 to 2.8 because of the many changes in

Gimp 2.8; many of the key features of Gimp 2.8 require considerable programming changes if you are using the traditional Gimp Plug-In architecture. Gimp 2.8 breaks many things. The change in API in the core of Gimp to the new plug-in model means that the supported method of upgrading from 2.6 to 2.8 is not as simple as "just run apt-get install gimp 2.8.0". Instead you will need to consider installing each piece of software that depends on

Gimp individually and in the correct order, and by manually adjusting the version numbers at a software level, we get a fully functional Gimp 2.8 in Ubuntu. Note that the steps that follow are not at all documented, so proceed with caution and expect to spend a few hours on manual tweaking. The fully patched. . The first step is to find and add the PPA repository to your system. The
