Photoshop Elements is a free version of the full Photoshop software that comes with every copy of Photoshop.

Elements' editing tools are identical to those found in the full Photoshop version; they allow for common editing tasks such as resizing and cropping. You can perform basic editing tasks by drawing shapes, using the Pencil tool, or using the Brush tool. You can learn more about the layers in the following section. ## Understanding Layers Photoshop is a raster image editing program — that is, you edit pixels by changing the color or pattern of those pixels. (See Chapter 3 for more on these pixels.) Layers are a way to construct and edit an image without moving or deleting any of the original pixels. You can use layers to separately display two different types of image elements or do different things to an image. In this book, you'll start to see many layers, and even more as the project progresses. With layers, you create an image by defining the base layer that contains the image's contents, and you define other layers that contain specific pieces of the image — like an image of a car's hood or the interior of a building. You can add, change, and delete individual layers, reposition them, and even merge layers or groups of layers with other layers or groups of layers. For example, Figure 1-1 shows an image of three people standing in a group. The gray rectangle in the figure represents the default or base layer that contains the people. You can create a new layer beneath the base layer by choosing Layer⇒New. Then you create two new layers above the base layer. (You can even create new layers after you add a new element to your base layer.) When you create or move a layer, the layer's pixels are not changed; it just means that you have a new layer defined. You can't physically move or delete a layer; you just duplicate it, move it, create a new one, or delete it. Figure 1-1: Create an image with several layers. When you create a new layer, Photoshop automatically creates a duplicate, or `_clone,_` of the layer. If you create a layer beneath the base layer, you have a new layer beneath the base layer. If you create a new layer above the base layer, you have a new layer over the base layer, like Figure 1-1 shows. You can have up to 256 layers

There wasn't much to be decided after a sloppy first half. But when Oklahoma State forward Zaine Curry grabbed an offensive rebound of a missed shot by Oklahoma point guard Trae Young with the game tied at 30 and Oklahoma's Blake Griffin fouled out less than three minutes later, then watched the Sooners' Steven Robinson step to the free throw line with a chance to give Oklahoma the lead, you knew that something big was going to happen. Because the only way Oklahoma State pulls off an improbable upset against a top-10 ranked team at home in the second round of the NCAA Tournament is if it makes something improbable happen.

passengers is now a matter of police investigation and a hectic investigation is still in progress. The bus was travelling from Panaji to Panjim on the NH 17 when the passenger posted a complaint on social media about the menace of the drivers. A 'threatening' post on social media According to the complainant, the bus was not arriving to their destination. The complainant had begun to walk towards Panjim when the driver said that he was leaving the road so that they could speak in private. The crowd was then asked to move aside and the driver allegedly threatened to kill the passengers. This incident occurred on Sunday, July 16, at around 11.45 a.m. The police have recorded the statement of the complainant. Currently, the police are trying to ascertain the motive of the driver. "What shocked me was how he initially addressed the crowd saying 'move away' and then proceeded to threaten me," the complainant was quoted by the police as saying. The police have filed a complaint and have asked the bus to stop and asked the driver to stay back for the recording of his statement. Goa needs action on driver menace "The law and order issue is quite alarming in Goa. I have spoken to many people who feel unsafe. Why can't the government step up their game?," commented one user on Twitter. "These drivers are spoiling it for the tourists and they are a menace to the people of Goa," added another user. "I would write to the concerned minister and make sure there is enough communication between the police and the transport department. This has to be stopped," commented yet another user. Relive the moment when the driver had threatened the crowd "Before the police arrive, I am going to give you a warning. What will you do? You can make the police come or you can simply get down," said the driver as he stepped out of the vehicle.
