1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the problem of providing a label for an article which is so assembled that it may be quickly removed from the article without the necessity of adhesives or other means for securing it to the article.

2. Description of the Prior Art Some prior proposals have involved providing the label with a self-adhesive backing. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 2,618,811 discloses a label which includes a strip of base material having a portion of an adhesive coating of a pressure sensitive adhesive which extends beyond the side edges of the base material for a limited distance. The strip of base material is provided with portions of adhesive which extend beyond the side edges of the base material in the same manner. Thus, when the label is applied to a panel, or the like, the edges of the panel and the label are coated with portions of adhesive. The adhesive coating is applied to the entire label in order to provide a sufficient amount of adhesive on the label to securely mount it to the article. The strip of base material is formed of a polyester material and the adhesive coating is applied to the entire area of the surface of the base material. Thus, the entire surface of the label has a sufficiently high concentration of adhesive to securely attach the label to the panel. One problem with this type of label is that it becomes difficult to remove the label when it becomes necessary to remove one of the labels from the panel. While the portions of adhesive which are on the panel and the label are firmly attached to each other, specifying the starting position and count. RKrenamer also implements options for converting text to uppercase or lowercase, capitalizing each word within the file name, inverting the case, as well as for enabling serialization after establishing the starting position, incrementation, leading zero, and prefix, suffix or custom position.
