What's New in This Release: The application now has a license that allows it to be used as long as it's installed in the background without being used. We report strong evidence for the presence of zoster virus (ZV) DNA in two lymphoid cell lines (CCRF-CEM and RPMI-8226) and one myelogenous leukemia cell line (K562). ZV DNA was detected in greater than 30% of proliferating cells using two DNA probes that target a conserved region and a divergent region of the ZV open reading frame 30 (ORF30), respectively. ZV antigen expression was demonstrated by immunofluorescent assay with a monoclonal antibody against ZV ORF30. Moreover, ZV antigen expression was observed in cells infected with the human herpes virus-2/KOS (HHV-2/KOS) containing the ZV ORF30 gene by fluorescence in situ hybridization. These results provide the first direct evidence for the presence of a ZV genome in human leukemia and lymphoid cell lines. Although the mechanism by which ZV transforms cells is not known, our findings further support the notion that ZV may play a role in the development and maintenance of certain human malignancies.
