Not very good with the texturing, the ship design is fine. The sound effects are horrible. Any bugs you may encounter are not fixed, don't come back. CHEAT EDIT: Edit game code to eliminate the need for the cheat. The game is unplayable. A: I have found a demo (with music) of this game. I don't know if it is the original or if you were just getting lucky, but the music does sync very nicely to the action. If your browser does not detect the audio, download here: A: Take a look at this YouTube game. The music is a horrible copy of the original game's music, but it syncs nicely to the action. Q: Resolve image files in RavenDB I'm using RavenDB 2.0 on my ASP.NET MVC 4 web app. RavenDB is working great, and is performing really well in terms of data throughput. One thing that's been bothering me has been dealing with images. When I retrieve document in a view, if one of the fields within the document is an image, then I have to download that image from the server onto the client before I can display it. During testing, I found that a lot of documents are being generated with at least one image field, so downloading that image every time a document is returned is starting to feel a little silly. Essentially, I'm looking for a way to get RavenDB to automatically download the image files when they are added to the store, so that any document containing an image can be returned without having to download the image first. Is this possible? Can I customize where RavenDB downloads images from? A: It sounds like you may be interested in the Raven.Client.Embedded.DocumentStorage.RavenDB.SQLite.Storage - I found this especially useful when working with RavenDb2 as the images are stored in an embedded database rather than in the RavenDb instance. Here's a snippet showing how this is used:

var client = new EmbeddedDocumentStorage(new SQLiteConfiguration()) c9d1549cdd

(1983 film) Bound by Love (also known as Wrong Is Right) is a 1983 American action film starring Fred Astaire and Dyan Cannon. It was the last film to feature Astaire before his death that year at the age of 86. This was also the last time he was seen on-camera in a major film role; Astaire played himself in the film's end credits. It was also the last time Cannon starred in a major film. Plot Director Fred Peabody and his director of photography Jerry Holman need a very quickly made film to close the Valentine Film Festival. Only 15 days from filming, they need two to perform a number danced by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Golden Wedding, but they can't find any dancers fast enough. Enter Monique Wallace, a big Broadway producer, who sells them on the idea of combining Astaire's Fred with Ginger's Ginger into a single, crossover film. Set in a large recreation ranch in California, the opening act is a race between the Fords, who have just caught up with the Cadillacs, and the Dodgers, the local gang, who would love to race the Fords before they do. The Fords, demonstrating their superiority with their new sodium-powered cars, corner a small amusement park run by Edwina Cooper, and she becomes enamored of Justin, a hotshot driver. As time and the closing date grow near, the Fords pick up a new member, the seductive Penny Lane; the Cadillacs pick up Leslie, who has a crush on Edwina; and the Dodgers join up with a heavy hitter, the Motor City Crips. The Fords, with Penny as his co-pilot, head out for the final race with Justin. But Justin is preoccupied with his girlfriend's imminent wedding, and doesn't make it in time. The gang race all over the road - and straight into an open gate. Edwina, who thinks she has won, is killed. Cooper tells the press that Ginger Rogers will take over her role, but starts to get upset when she receives a full frontal nude shot of Astaire on the front page of a newspaper announcing Ginger's plan to play Rogers in her own film. Cooper holds a press conference and fires Lester ("Motorman" Leslie, the only surviving member of her gang), who confides to Monique what has really happened - Ginger is old and sick, and needs a replacement,
