HOWARD: Giants shouldn't do it without getting proven first EAST RUTHERFORD — The Giants do a lot of things right. Yet they still can't stay out of the newspapers. I don't even care about the Gase bashing. I'm not overly enthused about the Giants being criticized for their decision to retain Gase, when they took a flier on Smith and passed on Gase. The Giants had an opportunity to go on a run with a quarterback who could have led them to a Super Bowl, to paraphrase a great coach I had the pleasure of working under, Bill Parcells. They failed. The Giants had a chance to get a proven veteran starter to play their quarterback of the future, which is never a bad idea, and failed, too. Now they're giving Gase a second chance. Fair enough. But they also have to show that he's the best available, a far tougher standard to clear than most teams will be able to meet. They've given him a short leash. That's good. But the contract Gase got was also reasonable, by the standards of recent history. To get the best out of Gase, the Giants need to be certain that he's the right fit for the team. And the team should show that it has no doubt about that before handing him a big contract. Otherwise it might be giving him an incentive to continue to play poorly. Gase, 31, is still a quarterback in name only. Smith, 25, is a quarterback who has started games. They're not the same quarterback. Now, Gase may never be the same quarterback as Smith. Gase has yet to start an NFL game. He played in only seven games as a rookie for the Dolphins, completing 24 of 37 passes for 144 yards with a touchdown. He was benched after nine games

Duplicate tabs, move them, save them in lists, rename them and choose whether or not to automatically activate them when the program starts. Easy installation and simple to run. What's New In?

A program to convert the task switcher into a tab switcher, and with this the operating system always knows which program to start up when you select the task switcher. It works in spite of the lack of tabbed windows in modern operating systems, or just how they might be styled by the designer. Many people have multiple monitors and use them to increase workspace, but they have almost never been able to organize all programs running on their system into a tabbed form factor. This is because a single program can have multiple instances where each one is right in front. This makes it difficult for you to press the task switcher icon. With WindowTabs this can all be set up in an automatic fashion. A program that works even when there are no tabbed windows available. It creates a special task switcher entry for itself, so every time you press the task switcher icon it shows all the programs you use, and in every one you can easily find the instance you want. A program that comes with different layouts so you can add personalizations which you can specify per program. All you have to do is drag and drop different layouts in order to create your own. A program to customize colors in order to give your desktop a personal and custom feel.
