CAD is a software program that is used to design and produce drawings of .Gerritsen's *in vitro* assessment of the relative activity of six orally disintegrating (OD) tablets. This paper describes the *in vitro* evaluation of the relative disintegration time (RDT) and diffusion rate of six OD tablets, all possessing the same pharmacologically active ingredient (API), loratadine. A previously published validated mathematical model was used to analyse the data from the RDT and X-ray images. The results showed an excellent correlation between the RDT data and the model. Correlation between the diffusion rate (D(t)) and the C-Log P data from the experimental determination showed a good correlation for all of the tablets. The dissolution profiles and X-ray images, on the other hand, indicated that the tablets were not rapidly disintegrated or that the drug
