But that's about all the information that Clapper offered in his opening statement during a House Intelligence Committee hearing on NSA reforms. In his opening statement, DNI James Clapper said that "the so-called metadata from the telephone calls that are sucked up by the NSA is not monitored by the NSA" and added, "what we are doing is not about listening in on people's telephone calls, but about inspecting the metadata." Those are the opening remarks from Clapper, the nation's top intelligence official who is defending the NSA's massive phone call metadata collection program and who admitted in March that the government "hadn't been totally forthcoming" about all the phone calls the NSA collects. Despite these important issues, Clapper's opening statement focused entirely on the "running commentary" between Al Qaeda and the other foreign terrorist groups and the "flowing traffic" that is now "in the pipeline" as information is shared with Al Qaeda and its allies. As Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) pointed out on Twitter, "It's interesting e79caf774b

Therefore, it is necessary to examine whether or not the behavior is safe as the sensor-based control approaches may allow the robot to move the head with the end effector when it is impossible to move the end effector due to a collision. Conclusion and Future Works paper, we have proposed a new method for obstacle avoidance using a fast head motion of the AM-ROBOT. The proposed method can be used in all three control modules in general. The control of the 3D heading sensor and the desired trajectory of the visual sensor can be used in safe environments, and the 3D end effector control can be used in hostile environments. The proposed method can realize the desired trajectory in both static and dynamic environments. The proposed method also ensures safety. In future works, we plan to develop a new controller to drive the end effector for an obstacle avoidance task using the fast head motion. Also, we want to develop a method to switch the control module of the robot when it collides with an object. Further, we want to develop a method to compute the time-varying workspace of the end effector and the robot. [99]{}
