The corticotropin-releasing factor (CRF) and CRF-receptor systems are recently established as important modulators of anxiety. In animal models of anxiety and in postmortem studies, CRF is increased in the amygdala, hippocampus and pituitary. The administration of CRF-receptor antagonists attenuates fear behaviors and may explain the efficacy of CRF-antagonists in the treatment of anxiety. Furthermore, the presence of CRF-receptor polymorphisms may be important for anxiety-related traits. Thus, the availability of human CRF-receptor antagonists may permit the delineation of the pathophysiology and potential therapeutic effect of CRF in patients. Chris Fox, CP24.com A lockdown at a Toronto mall has been lifted after a fight allegedly broke out inside the arcade at Century Plaza shopping mall in Scarborough on Thursday afternoon. Toronto police said they received a call for an altercation at the mall at Kenilworth Avenue and Steeles Avenue at about 12:48 p.m. When officers arrived, they said there was a large group of males fighting in the arcade area. "We had to put the lockdown in place for the safety of the public," Const. Clint Stibbe told CP24. "But we took that down as soon as we could." Stibbe said the suspects fled the scene after the fight began. However, police said they believe a suspect managed to grab something from one of the stores in the mall before leaving. No injuries were reported, but they are urging anyone who witnessed the 6d1f23a050
