Instead of calling me a "troll", you could have at least educated me to try and understand what I was telling you and you would have not seen me as a troll, you would have seen me as someone who was trying to give you advice. I have never owned a Dell laptop until a few years ago (had HP laptops since 2005). That is when I bought my last HP laptop. I am a longtime tech who has been buying tech products for over 20 years. Back in 2000 I was buying Compaq's. You need to spend time on Amazon, a LOT of time on Amazon and Google to even get close to enough info to understand what I was telling you. I had been saying the same thing to you for a while now and you still didn't get it. I would like to know why. What has been happening? I have been telling you the same thing for months now, and I guess you have a different interpretation of the text than I do. I would have thought that you would have at least had an idea by now of what I was trying to tell you. I have been saying what I thought was the most obvious thing and I kept telling you "It's not that difficult to get a bootable CD. You can just get Windows Vista or later and boot from that". Because you didn't understand what I was telling you, you called me a troll and are still trying to discredit what I was telling you. I admit that I should have called you out sooner and should have educated you to get your facts right. I did that for years on LinkedIn. I still do and I believe that posting on LinkedIn is still valid
