auctions are both a good and a bad thing. they are great for helping people get rid of stuff they don't need, but they can also drive up prices to such levels that items in your possession will become worthless. in the case of margaret thatcher, her grey silk smoking jacket fetched nearly $10,000 at auction in august, and that was just one of the items she had to let go of. a total of 75 items went under the hammer in london, and even when the auctioneer was asked if the auction was still running, he replied, "not yet," referring to it as "the game of poker that is never-ending." the most extensive poker chip collection ever auctioned was held in february 2014. the huge collection, which was on display at the pontevecchio gallery in london, was owned by the late artist doris salcedo. the collection contained a record-setting 31,000 pieces, though only half of those came from the collection of this particular owner. it's estimated that the chips are worth up to $250,000. at one point, the auctioneer was trying to figure out how many chips were in the collection and was asked by the auctioneer, "do you want me to go through the whole lot?" the auctioneer answered, "yes," and did just that. the chips from this collection were from the mid-century modern era, which was 1950s to the early 1970s. the top three chips are worth around $1,000, and the most expensive chip is worth more than $6,000. the u.s. team will be led by chuck bethany taylor, who is looking to become the first female to win the world series of poker. the north american team will be captained by former world champ scott pittman. the duo, both of whom are still playing on the tour in 2010, hope to continue their poker career in vegas in january. to create a game like this i tried to keep the same feeling that someone might get when they watch a professional poker player play. watching someone else play a game that you understand could be a lot more exciting than watching a computer. we tried to make the look and feel of the cards and the animations as realistic as possible. we had to create a card and an animated deck. we had to make the animations and the transitions between the animations smooth and the cards flicker as they come out of the deck. we had to make sure that the look of the cards is what would you expect to see if you were playing a game of strip poker. it was important that the game felt like it was a human being playing the game. we tried to keep the animations simple and the cards moving realistically. the cards should be perfect for a strip poker game. if you put a real deck of cards in the game we wouldn't have any animation in that game. the moving cards make it feel more realistic. video poker is not a perfect game. in the long run it's just a simple game of luck. as in real poker if you get a hand you can't win then you're going to lose. there is a lot of analysis about different kinds of video poker games. we tried to make sure that the game we designed was a good video poker game. it's a well-known fact that italians are fans of poker, but the two-player game they play isn't the same as our version. the two-player game doesn't have the dress-up element that the game does, and players don't have to memorize the rules or set aside money in the middle of the game. instead, players just take turns showing off their hand by betting or calling, and if they are dealt bad cards, they can fold. this game uses five cards, and a banker is not necessary. 5ec8ef588b
