This utility requires the Internet connection when running the search. I have very bad news. Your Computer has probably been infected with a very dangerous virus (Ransomware).

Ransomware destroys the data on your computer or encrypts it so you have to pay to decrypt it. Ransomware usually doesn't affect only one computer, it's a widespread threat that can affect your whole network. As soon as the Ransomware makes a connection to the C&C server of the malware, it connects to another server (botnet) At this point, a second server is infected and turns your computer into an zombie (bot) Your computer will receive a command and starts scanning for other computers in your network, so you can be infected too. It's important to note that you may never see any malicious software or notice if your system has been attacked. You can be infected with Ransomware even if you've installed a good antivirus program. You can see the report on this website to help you determine whether your computer is infected. If it is infected, it's best to remove the virus immediately, and you'll need to pay the ransom to get your data back. What is Ransomware?

Ransomware is a type of malicious software that tricks its victims into believing it has been created by a legitimate source. Instead of encrypting your data, Ransomware uses a combination of worms, hacking, and social engineering techniques to infect your computer, or entire network. These malicious programs are meant to appear as though they were sent to you by someone you know or trusted, and the program itself may look like it was created by someone who genuinely works for you. It's important to note that it doesn't necessarily send a ransom message, and it may just cause the computer to appear sluggish, freeze up, or produce strange errors. The malicious program will steal data and hold it for ransom until the victim pays up, usually by sending the hacker a 'donation' or '

The application is created in such a way that a single click will turn your computer into a secure hub in which nobody can access your files, regardless of the security measures that are in place. KEYMACRO is a feature-rich application which integrates a powerful kernel-mode driver that provides complete access control of the computer and drives of the user. With it, all operations can be performed by the user who was logged on the computer, regardless of the user account or login, which effectively prevents unauthorized access to computer and data files.

KEYMACRO provides the ability to lock, unlock, password protect or encrypt individual files, folders, drives or the entire system. The main advantage of this application is that it is compatible with all operating systems which means that it will work on any computer that is based on Windows (95/98/ME/2000/XP), Linux (RedHat/SuSE/Fedora/Mandrake/Ubuntu) and other Unix systems. The application does not only lock or encrypt files, but it also allows a user to create a secure virtual hard drive from any existing drives and partition in order to carry out effective data encryption. Through the interface, a user can set the desired options for each drive and each partition, including the availability of partitions in system boot menu, encryption method, algorithm and password. With KeyMACRO, you can also set up remote access settings, include file system type, password for the virtual drive, password for a drive or a partition, configure the number of parallel threads, memory size and priority level for the decryption process. The parameters for each drive and partition are configured in the 'Configuration' section of the program. In addition, you can also create and configure a public key in order to avoid the possibility of key compromise and to protect your data from unauthorized users. Once all the settings have been configured, the user can start the process by entering the required password. After that, the application will start a process that will decrypt each file, folder and drive or partition in order to give access only to authorized users. In order to make the application easier to use, a user can drag and drop a file, folder or partition to the KeyMACRO's main window in order to protect it. It provides you with two different methods of securing your information. Either you encrypt any drive partition that contains personal information using combinations of different hashing and encryption algorithms or simply mount the virtual partitions in your hard drive, then save your data. Since the encryption process can be carried out with two different authentication types, namely 'Password' and 'USB Stick', the application helps you to add an extra layer of security, thus protecting your critical data from unauthorized users. When you launch Comodo Disk Encryption for the first time, you will notice that all your drives are automatically recognized (after a restart has been performed). When you click on a random partition, detailed information such as file system, free space, encryption method and total size are displayed in the bottom pane of the program. The right-click menu enables you to easily encrypt or decrypt the selected partition, edit the available settings, as well as format it by modifying the file system to NTFS, FAT32 or FAT and the allocation unit size. By accessing the Encrypt option, you are able to choose one of the available authentication types, then set the properties according to your whims such as hash algorithm and password. The 'Virtual Drives' tab enables you to view all the mounted drives in your system and create, mount, remove or unmount them, as well as edit the encryption settings effortlessly. In case you want to decrypt a drive, you will just have to choose the proper option from the context menu and bring back the partition to its original form so that the drive becomes accessible
