Notes KeyM Macro is used to render the PDF version of selected text regions as a multi-page PDF document. KeyM is a macro for usage on Adobe Acrobat. You can use it to generate PDF documents from selected text regions. The result is a "rendered" PDF document, showing the selected text as plain text in the pages. The document is created within the Acrobat application, which is typically loaded during the execution of the macro. This type of document cannot be opened in Adobe Acrobat Reader, which does not interpret the code of the macro. KeyM Macro can be used with any version of Adobe Acrobat. The following will render selected text as a PDF document: • Using an Adobe Acrobat (e.g. Acrobat 6/7, Acrobat 9, Acrobat X) document. • Using a combination of Adobe Acrobat and Adobe Reader (e.g. Acrobat 6/7 and Reader 6/7). • Using Adobe Acrobat Document File (e.g. Acrobat 8). • Using Adobe Acrobat DC, Version 11. • Using any Acrobat version prior to Version 12 (e.g. Acrobat 9, Acrobat 8). Select the text regions to be printed, either using the document options, or by entering the start and end text positions on the document. Please note that the text must have been selected with the SelectText function to work with KeyM Macro. After selecting the text regions, the macro will start rendering a PDF document from the regions of text in the document. The documents are saved in PDF format. You can use the "Save" function in the Application Menu or with the keyboard to save the result to disk.
