Time4Breax is a reliable and easy to handle application that enables you to log all the hours of your daily work and set reminders for breaks. You may easily configure the software according to your work pattern and set the maximum work intervals or the indicated breaks. The purpose of Time4Breax is to help you to take regular breaks from work and care for your health. Pause the hard work Time4Breax is especially dedicated to users who spend their day working in front of the computer. Sitting down and looking straight into the monitor can be damaging for your health, on the long term and the solution is simple and free of charge: take a break. With Time4Breax you can easily set break reminders. The software can display three types of timers: the work, the break and the global timer, that indicates the time elapsed since the program was opened. The timer on the left works as a stopwatch, while the counter on the right records the total time, in all the sessions. Clicking the Have a break button pauses the work timer and enables the pause counter. Automatically breaking from work The software enables you to operate it using quick keyboard commands or it can automatically stop the work timer and display a break reminder. You may mark the maximum number of hours of allowed work time per day and the interval at which the reminder should be posted. The note can contain a small piece of text, be accompanied by a custom sound or trigger a program to run. Moreover, you may set a backup timer, if the break reminder is ignored, at the end of which the user is forced to log out or the desktop is locked. Other solutions can be shutdown, hibernation or computer stand by. Be reminded of taking breaks With Time4Breax you can configure your work schedule to be composed of custom length breaks every few hours. The reminder can go off again and again, if ignored the first time, at a specified time interval. Time4Breax is a simple to use software that can record the time you work every day and prompt reminders on the screen that you should take a small break.
